What We Read S04E11 Tudor Britain: Historical Fiction Recommendations and TBR The Morville Hours Katherine Swift
While The Morville Hours tells the story of the creation of a garden at the Morville estate in Shropshire, England, it is much more than a gardening book. Katherine Swift had worked as a rare book librarian before she took on the garden, and her love of research and hunting out original sources comes well to the fore here.

The Morville Hours by Katherine Swift - Goodreads
Katherine Swift was clearly aiming at "garden literature" in "The Morville Hours". I think she tried too hard. She chose to tell her tale about becoming the chief gardener at Morville, a British National Trust property in Shropshire, by wrapping it within her account of the medieval Book of Hours, which made it heavy sledding for me.

The Morville Hours: The Story of a Garden: Swift ...
The book, like the garden it describes, is deeply personal. Katherine Swift meditates on the geology of Wenlock Edge, wonders what moles dream of, reflects on the hardships of rural life (she is no sentimentalist) and ponders on her own family's far from idyllic history. Although "The Morville Hours" will appeal to gardeners and garden lovers, it isn't a book about gardening - it's about the way in which gardens reconnect us with the bigger picture.
